Grand Slam of Ultrarunning

Disclosure and some History of the Grand Slam of Ultrarunning.

The idea of running the four oldest 100 mile trail runs in the country came from Fred Pilon of Ultrarunning Magazine back in 1985. He called Steve Baugh who was the race director of the Wasatch Front 100 Mile Endurance Run at the time. Since Wasatch was the final race of the four it seemed natural for the Wasatch 100 to organize the Grand Slam and have awards in conjunction with Wasatch's awards ceremony. Steve collaborated with John Grobben, current and long standing Wasatch 100 race director, and they came up with the name Grand Slam of Ultrarunning and established it in cooperation with the race directors of the other four races involved. The first Grand Slam Award was given to Tom Green in 1986. The Wasatch 100 has continued organizing and managing the event since that time.

We thank Stan Jensen who has been kind enough to host the Grand Slam website at www.run100s.com.

GRAND SLAM OF ULTRARUNNING

2017 AWARD

Western States Endurance Run
 Vermont 100 Mile Endurance Run
 Leadville Trail 100
 Wasatch Front 100 Mile Endurance Run

“Only those who go too far know how far they can go.”

—T.S. Elliot—

What it is ...

The Grand Slam of Ultrarunning award is recognition for those who complete four of the oldest 100 mile trail runs in the U.S. The “Slam” consists of officially finishing the Western States Endurance Run, the Vermont 100 Mile Endurance Run, the Leadville Trail 100 and the Wasatch Front 100 Mile Endurance Run all in the same calendar year. The Grand Slam of Ultrarunning Award was established in 1986.

The Award

The Grand Slam of Ultrarunning Award is a beautifully sculpted eagle with engravings signifying the runners name and accomplishment. Because Wasatch is the final leg of the four races, the Grand Slam awards are presented at the Wasatch Front 100 Mile Endurance Run banquet.

Registration Deadline

In order to be eligible for the award and official recognition, registration must be received by June 14, 2017. Registration fee is $80.00. Refunds prior to June 14th will be subject to a $10.00 processing fee. No refunds after June 14th. Send signed registration form and fee to:
